

Nihilism: The CounterOrder

Contemporary Nihilism is a living, active expression of revolution and personal development being conducted by individuals and organized forces throughout the world. In this regard The CounterOrder serves as a unique communications network for intellectual development and collaboration between Nihilists.

Initiated in 1998, the website www.CounterOrder.com (the word 'counterorder' being a synonym for revolution) includes a wide array of original material on the topic of nihilism and related ideas written and created by Freydis, the nom de guerre for an author and artist based in the United States.

Nihilism is simply when conditions are so unhealthy within our surroundings that destruction is desirable for its own sake without a fear of the future.

Nihilism: The CounterOrder

As established structures and the esteemed values previously assumed permanent crumble and fall around us, we're gradually realizing that destruction is as important as construction, and that death is just as important as life. Everything begins, grows and dies one way or another. Realizing this is to also recognize that many things have outlived their usefulness to us, both collectively and as individuals.

In order to survive and prosper we have to develop nimble minds and critical faculties capable of discerning the healthy and the harmful. We have to have the strength and courage to question the obvious and the popular, and the strength to demolish beliefs, values and material structures when necessary.

Dmitrii Pisarev, a 19th century Russian Nihilist, said, "What can be broken, should be broken."

Nihilism is about testing the rules, assumptions and beliefs of our age.

Yes, Nihilism can be an endeavor of physical destruction typified by the classical revolution of barricades and firebombs. But Nihilism can just as well be a purely intellectual endeavor, destroying flawed faith and unhealthy beliefs. Similarly Nihilism can include the entire world, or merely your living-room; the cultural mindset of a nation, or just the thoughts inside your own head.

Our revolution need not be violent, just as it can be a radical change in physical surroundings or a radical alteration in perceptions and way of thinking within an individual mind.

Indeed, you may already be a revolutionary, just as many are already nihilists but lack the word and concept to describe themselves!
